Industrial Outlook Guides Speculation and Stocks Fall to a Slightly Lower Level

BEARS ATTACK PRICES WITH DESIRED RESULT

Strained Industrial Situation Also Caused Declines.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8 .- The stock market opened fractionally lower, rallied slightly and then developed heaviness. The rally was accompanied by extreme dullness, but the yielding in prices was the result of a moderate increase in selling pressure.

The dominant keynote of the speculation was the discussion of the industrial situation, stimulated by the recent reduction in the dividend on United States Steel common and the falling off shown in the earnings of that great corpora-

There was a general uniformity in the concessions suffered by the railway list, which gradually declined approximately a point. In the local tractions Metroolitan Street Railway lost over a point but the other declines in this group were fractional only.

While speculation was not marked by conspicuous liquidation, sentiment of the trading element was inclined to despondency.

Railroad bonds slightly lower. Government bonds unchanged.

London houses sold about 20,000 shares today. The general market continued heavy through the morning with some investment buying, but with a slightly larger supply of investment liquidation. Amalgamated Copper and Sugar were sold down by room traders, on the gen eral idea that the recent important events in industrial circles will extend
